Australian Women's Amateur Championship

History

The first Australian Ladies' Amateur Championship was held in 1894, just one year after the inaugural Ladies' British Open Amateur Championship. It was played at Geelong as a 36-holes Bogey Competition, with 17 players with handicaps ranging from scratch to 24. The entrants played for the Championship Cup which originally cost 25 pounds. For the next five years all Championships were held at either Caulfield or Geelong.

The turn of the century saw some changes with venues in South Australia and New South Wales, and two Championships decided by Match Play. This was followed by a switch to Stroke Play, usually 54-holes, a method retained for 20 years.

By 1906, or perhaps earlier, the Ladies' Championship was held as part of the Open and Amateur Golf Championship Meeting played under the auspices of the Australian Golf Union. In 1926 the Australian Ladies' Golf Union took over the conduct of the event, and in 1928 adopted a format based on two rounds of qualifying, with the leading 8 to advance to match play, with the final over 36-holes.

In 1935, all states were represented for the first time, together with a touring team of six from Great Britain, with a total of 91 entries. By 1955 the number of players advancing to match play was 32 and by 1958 the Championship entries had grown to 100, with the handicap limit dropped to 9.

At varying times the ALGU considered reverting to a Stroke Play Championship but agreed that the States' programs provided the necessary practice in this type of play. It was an accepted tradition for the venue state to entertain visiting players and officials at a formal dinner party following play of the Championship final.

Since 2007 the Women's Championship has been played in conjunction with the Australian Men's Amateur Championship with a handicap limit of approximately 3 and a maximum field size of 72 players.

In 2021, the Australian Amateur changed shape from a stroke-play qualifying into match-play to a 72-hole stroke play championship.

The Ross Herbert National and International Teams Trophies were introduced in 2009 and are played in conjunction with the two Qualifying Rounds, whereby each State and Country consists of two males and two females.

Miss C.B (Eveline) McKenzie (Vic), Miss Pat Borthwick (NSW), Miss Sandra McCaw (Vic) and Miss Mona Macleod (Vic) all hold the record for winning the Championship on four occasions each.
